

One small price could save you thousands if your vehicle is totaled.

What Is GAP Coverage?

GAP (Guaranteed Auto Protection) covers the “gap” between what your vehicle is worth and what your insurance provider will pay in the event your vehicle is stolen or totaled in an accident.

Why Add GAP Coverage to Your Loan?

GAP helps protect you against unforeseen financial loss. If your car is stolen or totaled, your insurance provider may not pay out enough for you to pay off your auto loan. You are liable for the difference between what you owe on the loan and your insurance settlement.

The insurance company's payoff is based on your vehicle's actual cash value at the time of the loss. The minute you drive a new car off the lot, its value declines. If your car is declared a total loss, especially within the first few years, you could be in for a costly surprise due to the rapid depreciation of new cars.

Although most lenders require you to have full coverage insurance when you have an auto loan, GAP coverage isn't usually included. The remaining balance you owe on your auto loan, your deductible, rental car expense, and other costs can easily equal thousands of dollars and it could be money out of your pocket.
